SPRING/SUMMER 2020 (ENGLISH)

Jakarta, Indonesia – 21rd October 2019

IKYK Spring/Summer 2020 collection is the current child of many IKYK's creations inspired by when the Designer, Anandia Putri observed how the people from Africa dressed up as if it's their way of life. She just cannot take her eyes on them every time they crossed their path on the other side of the world. The collection that consists of twenty looks will be shown at Jakarta Fashion Week 2020 and launched altogether at The Goods Dept. Pacific Place on the 1st of November 2019.

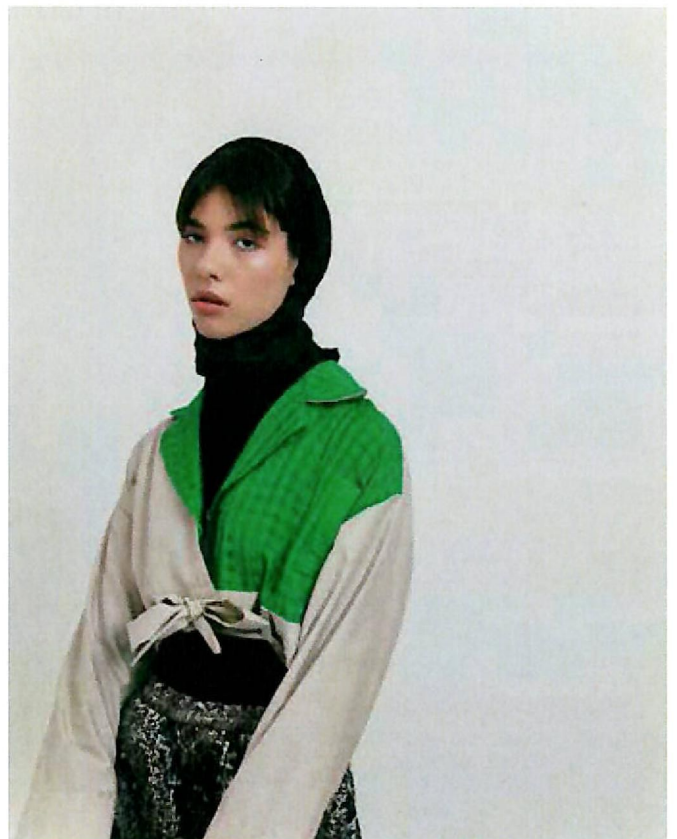

The Muslim traveler from Africa usually come from Sudan, Kenya, Egypt, and other countries around them. With the richness of culture and the exotics of their skin, these people are known for their vivid selection of colors of their clothes that catches people's eyes. The mix-and-match and the contrast set beautifully for Putri's point of view that brings the feel of liveliness, coolness, and confidence.

In this collection, still in the modesty approaches, IKYK takes fresher and playful designs of assortments that embrace different colors which normally not seen on its previous collection that mixed cool, warm, vibrant and understated palette. Ranging from chiffon, nylon, gabardine, polyester organza, and other relaxed fabrics, IKYK portrays safari mood from animal prints and its moniker colors of beige and ivory. This modern modest assembly trusted to be comfortable and wearable for those who wear hijab or who does not. Regardless of the renewed look that Putri wants to show in this new collection, IKYK's oversized silhouette like long outerwear, parkas, and coats are still going to be seen consistently in the mixtures with medium length jackets.

To complete the collection, IKYK is collaborating exclusively with footwear brand Rajnik to create three leather strappy sandals with velcro straps and beads.
